Volunteers install Amanda Katz' Vessel as Terrence Karpowicz' sculpture Pinky looks on.

We're part of something important.

Lubeznik Center for the Arts has a vision that we are all part of—a community cannot prosper without a vision, and Lubeznik Center for the Arts is surely a guiding force in this community in that it inspires the imaginations of those who come here—to view a show, take a class, browse through the Gallery Shop, or participate in an event. The Center is a liberating force for artists and non-artists alike, who have joined with us to create and sustain an enthusiastic, welcoming, and creative community.

The arts are fundamental to history, culture, and education. It is the ongoing commitment of Lubeznik Center to fulfill our mission by making high-quality visual and performing arts experiences accessible, and beneficial, to the region. In the past year, shows and cultural events as diverse as jazz concerts, dramatic performances, poetry slams, graffiti demonstrations, French Art Nouveau posters, Saloon Society photos and a brilliant sampling from the eclectic and contemporary McDonald's Corporation private art collection have made you, the Center, and your community, part of something important. Thank you.

Fifty-five “backers” joined together on internet funding website, Kickstarter, to bring artist Amanda Katz’ 10 foot tall, 750 pound sculpture, Vessel to Michigan City. Volunteers, LCA members and staff were on hand to help the artist unload and install the piece — while local media covered the event. Truly a cooperative effort, Vessel's Voyage was a hit with young and old.

In 2011, over 18,000 visitors toured Lubeznik Center’s five galleries, experiencing innovative work by nationally and internationally known artists. Designed to stimulate, educate and provoke interaction, world-class exhibitions are complimented by engaging and exciting public programs. Evoking Chicago’s Saloon Society of the ‘60s and ‘70s, black and white images by photographer Jack Lane attracted a colorful, overflow crowd to the Center’s Hyndman Gallery for a “spirited” evening of bar stories with newsman and writer Rick Kogan. A First Friday beer-tasting event was similarly popular, attracting over 200 people eager to learn more about local artisan brews.

Text Messages, an exhibition of work by seven artists who employ language, text or typography to convey meaning and provoke conversation, opened in July to rave reviews. Inspired by Text Messages, August’s First Friday event provided revelers with a rare opportunity to watch as an original piece of art was produced. Over the course of the evening, artist Marco Salazar painted Gallery Shop manager Esther Guncheon’s car while an appreciative crowd (some traveling from as far as South Bend) gathered in Lubeznik Center’s north parking lot. How will we top that? Be here in 2012 to find out!

Housed in their corporate offices in Oak Brook, IL, and throughout the United States, McDonald's Corporate art collection spans decades and includes more than 3,700 pieces of 2- and 3-D art works by regional, national and international artists. Thanks to a unique collaboration, LCA visitors enjoyed a rare opportunity to view this distinguished collection in our Hyndman Gallery.

In support of our mission to “enrich the arts experience within the region” Lubeznik Center for the Arts premiered several exhibitions in 2011 that had never previously been viewed in public. Beyond the Arches: Selected Works from McDonald's Corporate Art Collection featured 38 pieces from a remarkable collection of 20th century works by American artists. This exclusive exhibition was covered in both local and regional media, including a television feature by Chicago's Ron Magers. When One Hundred Views of Chicago (pictured, right) opened in February of 2011 it was the first time the work had been shown in public since its original unveiling in 1967. A folio of 100 black-and-white woodcut prints by Polish immigrant Bronislaw Bak, this stylized collection of landmarks, people and street scenes was “discovered” in our permanent collection by curator CarolAnn Brown and enthusiastically embraced by visitors. LCA members met Bak's son, Clemmens, who shared stories of his father's life and work at an exclusive preview event. An international exhibition of wood-turned objects and a private collection of rare and original Belle Epoque posters were two more examples of work you wouldn't get a chance to see anywhere but Lubeznik Center.

Making dyes from nature, planting seeds in decorated containers, tasting new foods and cooking healthy dishes are among the after-school activities offered as part of a recently developed gardening program which includes an entrepreneurial project where students create and sell note cards decorated with potato printing techniques.

Each year hundreds of local children from economically disadvantaged homes get an opportunity to visit Lubeznik Center's galleries and classrooms. We are the sole provider of twice weekly arts instruction for nearly 900 school children, most of whom have never been to a museum or gallery. In fact, few have travelled beyond Michigan City. The exhibition tours and accompanying art instruction they receive here represent a rare chance for these students to imagine a world outside their experiences, stimulating academic engagement and achievement. Our Art Night program goes one step further—providing hundreds of struggling families with an opportunity to share a hot meal and engage in an art activity—building self-esteem, encouraging communal discourse, parental engagement and creative problem-solving. Art is both inspiration and opportunity for clients of Michiana Resources and the Social Learning Institute for the Disadvantaged. We've seen amazing stories emerge from those classes. New partnerships and a relationship with the Smithsonian Institution will bring stimulating exhibits and educational programming to the region in 2012, engaging the many audiences that look to us for unique experiences.

April 2011, Lubeznik Center received a Creativity and Innovation Award from the Center for Creative Solutions for development of our First Fridays @ 5 series. With over 20 businesses participating, and the establishment of an Uptown Arts District, this monthly after-hours art event has “gone viral” attracting new visitors and businesses to Michigan City’s downtown.

Art can be a catalyst for bigger things. In 2011, Lubeznik Center staff, members and partners were part of several projects that aim to define the region as an art enclave and attract development and tourism to Michigan City. Key amongst those efforts was the formation of an Uptown Arts District, extending from Lubeznik Center north along historic Franklin Street. We’ve also been instrumental in the formation of Michigan City’s Public Art Committee—enriching the community through outdoor art. 2011 saw the completion of Charles Wescott Park and the installation of sculptures in two locations. A huge opportunity for local artists, as well as the cultural and economic vitality of our community, the ArtSpace project took an important step forward in 2011, gaining funding approval for purchase of the Warren Building on Franklin. In its 30th year, Lubeznik Center’s Lakefront Art Festival was bigger and better than ever. This year’s fest connected thousands of visitors with over 100 artisans from around the country in Michigan City’s Washington Park. It is challenging for a small community art center to develop and implement an ambitious plan to redefine and reinvigorate a community—but with your participation, that’s just what we’re aiming to do.

A photograph of a busy outdoor market stall. In the foreground, a man in a dark polo shirt is looking at a large, ornate, circular metal tray. To his right, a woman with short blonde hair and purple glasses is looking down at something in her hands. In the background, another man is visible, and the stall is filled with various items, including a green lampshade with a bird design and a white lampshade. A large, semi-transparent yellow watermark with the word "bigger" is overlaid across the center of the image.
